A LITTLE NONSENSE.

She—"Why has Boston the name of being such a bad city?" He—"Because of the number of crooks in the streets I suppose."—Harvard Lampoon.

"And you have never kept a dog?" "Well, I don't go quite so far as that. My neighbor's two dogs get all their meals at my kitchen door."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Cholly—"I was thrown out of a cawdige the other day, and would have been killed if I hadn't lighted on something soft." She—"Really! Did you fall head first?"—London Tit-Bits.

Somewhat Different. — Clara—"Did papa give assent?" Tom—"No. He said he had no objection to our getting married, but not a cent would he give us."—Chicago Daily News.

Still a Subscriber. — Old Friend—"You have made a mortal foe of Col. Kaintuck." Western Editor—"Eh? Who—do you mean it?" "He threatens to shoot you on sight." "Oh, is that all? I was afraid he was going to stop his paper."—N. Y. Weekly.

Not Consistent. — "There was a time," said the chronic growler, "when the drama was a force in education, but now the stage is bad—thoroughly bad." "Then why did you object the other evening," asked his wife, "when that woman's big hat saved you the pain of looking upon its badness?"—Philadelphia Press.

The Ingenious Drug Clerk.—Stern Father—"And did you lose your situation for knocking down that valuable plaster cast?" Smart Son—"Indeed, I didn't. Before the proprietor returned I had pulverized the pieces in a mortar, poured some perfumed dope over it and was selling it for a brand new toilet powder. He's going to raise my wages Saturday."—Baltimore American.

The Revival Meeting.

The evangelistic meetings at the tent on the public school campus are growing in interest. The service last night was well attended many could not find room under the tent. Quite a number manifested a desire to forsake sin, and be saved. Evangelist Cassidy preached a fine sermon. The meeting at ten o'clock this morning was the best morning meeting up to date. Everybody invited to the service this evening at 8 o'clock.

Killed on the Bridge.

A sad accident occurred Saturday afternoon at the Frisco bridge at Grand river which cost a young girl her life. A couple from Ottowa were traveling in a buggy and the young lady being afraid to remain in the buggy while the river was being forded, attempted to cross on the railroad bridge, and when near the middle, the east bound passenger came along and struck her knocking her off and killing her instantly. The name of the unfortunate girl was Amy Daniel.

Miami Won.

The Vinita ball team fell down yesterday worse than ever losing to Miami. A few errors in the second inning by Vinita gave Miami two runs and from that time on the home boys were all to pieces. All the luck of the game was with Miami as every time they hit the ball it went where there was no fielder, thus they won by a score of 7 to 2. Time was 2 hours liveup was:
